HUGE AMOUNTS OF AMERICAN CURRENCY HELD ABROAD DUE TO STABILITY OF U. S. MONEY

Estimates Place Total More Than Half Billion—Counterfeiters at Work in Foreign Lands Aided by Ready Acceptance of Dollar—Large Sums of Worthless Confederacy Money Passed Abroad

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—American currency held in circulation abroad amounts to from a half billion to three quarters of a billion dollars, it became known today in connection with a federal investigation of the situation.

A considerable per cent of this enormous sum is "salted away" in safety deposit vaults and other hiding places of money awaiting a favorable time for investment in foreign currency or American securities.

An intensive study to determine the exact amount of American money abroad, the amount exported annually in "emigrant remittances" and spent overseas by tourists, has been launched by the department of commerce bureaus of the treasury, and other financial and statistical departments.

In this probe many interesting facts have developed.

Noteworthy among them is a new "business"—the counterfeiting of American money in foreign countries.

Government officials have been asked by the Austrian bankers association for all information in dealing with counterfeiters, the making of surplus money being particularly prevalent in that nation.

No action is contemplated by this government against counterfeiting abroad, but it was understood that foreign countries where currency is almost worthless are taking steps to prosecute counterfeiters for fraud and obtaining money under false pretences, spurious specie being disposed of there as the genuine American article. Because the American dollar has become a currency standard in many European countries, counterfeiters of both silver and paper money are getting rich, according to official information.

The investigation developed that a considerable quantity of worthless money of the American confederacy, used during the civil war, was taken abroad and disposed of as currency of the United States.

Emigrant remittances which in 1922 amounted to about $400,000,000 according to official estimates, will not exceed that amount in 1923.

Most of the remittances this year have been in $5, $10 and $20 bills. American tourists expenditures were considerably below the approximates $350,000,000 of 1922 preliminary estimates shown.

Fewer persons went abroad during the past summer and autumn. On the other hand more foreign

Poultry Is Cheap For Holiday Feast

Poultry is cheaper this Christmas than it has been in many years, declared Charles Lorenz, poultry merchant, when interviewed Friday.

He added that turkeys were selling rapidly and that he predicted there would be more turkey dinners this Christmas than on Thanksgiving. They were retailing at 37 cents per pound Friday. Last year at this time they were selling at 55 cents per pound. At Thanksgiving time this year, turkeys sold for 42 cents per found.

Ducks, geese and chickens are affected by the drop in poultry prices. Ducks and geese retailed at 23 cents per pound Friday. Last year they sold for 28 cents per pound. Chickens retailed at 22 cents per pound Friday. They sold for 25 cents last year at this time, Lorenz said.

MODERNISTS AGREE TO TRUCE DURING SEASON OF PEACE

Debate Followed by Fight of Women and Calling of Police

NEW YORK, Dec. 22. — An armistice prevailed today in the internal "war" over bible interpretation between fundamentalists and modernists within the Protestant Episcopal church.

Rev. Dr. Stuart L. Tyson, spokesman for the "rebel" factions supporting Rev. Lee W. Heaton of Fort Worth, Texas, who is said to have denied the virgin birth of Christ, said he was in sympathy with the action of Bishop William T. Manning, head of the New York diocese and leader of the conservatives in asking "A Christmas truce."

Bishop Manning in a letter to all New York Episcopal clergymen said:

"Let us devote ourselves to prayer during this season of peace, good will, and brotherly love."

"He added however that the "questions before us are serious and must be met."

It was expected other modernist clergymen would join with Rev. Tyson in approval of the proposed

FOX ROUND-UP AND PIGEON SHOOT TO BE HELD AT MOUND

The farmers in the vicinity of Mound will participate in a fox round up and pigeon shoot Saturday, December 29. Anyone wishing to take part in the hunt should be on the starting line by 9 o'clock Saturday morning. No guns will be allowed on the line except in cases or sacks. The close-in will be made on the Blair Parkhill farm at 10:30 o'clock, following which the women of the Mill Creek Valley Grange will serve lunch in the grange hall. The pigeon shoot will be held in the afternoon.

Following are the lines from which the hunters will start:

North, from Scheetz Ridge road, past Lloyd Holderbaum farm to Stone schoolhouse, to the William Conrad farm, to Jacob Bechtol farm. West from the Jacob Bechtol farm to the Shepler schoolhouse, south to the Howard Dawson farm, then along the Keene-tp line to the W. R. Boyd farm, then along the Coshocton-New Bedford road to starting point.

Following are the captains chosen for the hunt: Northeast corner, C. C. Lower, Lloyd Holderbaum, N. C. Lower, S. E. Welling, Walter Welling, Nathan Bechtol; west line—Oscar Guthrie, Raymond Ames, Carl Hecker, Charles Endsley, Oliver Bretzius, Leonard Bechtol, south line—Lloyd Miller, George Lowery, Robert Dudgeon, Raymond Linebaugh, Oscar Martin, Joseph Lower, east line—L. E. Lower, Arthur Boyd, F. E. Scheetz, Floyd Parkhill, Ira Scheetz, Blair Parkhill, Harvey Bretzius.

Further Revelations of Tiny Entities May Prove Key to Mystery of Life

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22. — The human body is made up of millions of infinitely small solar systems which operate virtually under the same laws of nature which regulate the revolutions of the earth and planets about the sun, according to eminent scientists at the United States Bureau of Standards.

If you should stick a pin in your finger it probably would penetrate the orbits of a half-dozen universes all with their own little suns, planets, comets and moons revolving about a central nucleus.

Not only the human body but the structure of every animal, of every property of nature, placed under a powerful magnifying glass of sufficient power, might yield

WORLD WAR VETS' WIDOWS ENTITLED TO PENSIONS NOW

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22. — Widows of American war veterans will no longer be denied pensions if their husbands were beneficiaries of the government during their lifetime, Secretary of the Interior Work ruled today.

The decision reverses a practice that has been in effect in the pension bureau for many years and has resulted in the denials of pensions to widows when the adjudication of their claims indicated that their husbands had not been entitled to pensions.

Yuletide Traditions Differ Widely in Various Nations of Christendom

MERRY, MERRY CHRISTMAS, 1923!

By FRANK SAVAGE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22 — Tradition, handed down through many centuries and interpreted according to individual and national tastes in far-flung lands of Christendom, has developed widely varying customs for celebrating the anniversary of the birth of the Christ child.

Between now and the end of the year Christmas bells will peal from many church towers and carols will be sung in hundreds of tongues, but their manner of chiming and caroling are likely to be in striking contrast to the yuletide melodies to which we are accustomed in America.

There is considerable difference, also, in the feasting, or lack of it, the gift making, and the superstitions that charge the atmosphere at this time of the year with that vague, indescribable element which we call "the Christmas spirit."

While Britain gorges itself on plum pudding that wouldn't float in a mercury bath, and America devours flocks of turkeys and mountains of dressing, Sweden kneels in deepest humility and the Lapps bow meek heads in solemn homage.

While little children in Italy throng the streets, reciting Godly verses, the Russians chant the myths of the Goddess of the Sun, and most anything might happen in New York—from special theatrical attractions to Bachanalian revels that seem never to have heard of Mr. Volstead nor the Eighteenth Amendment.

"LAMB'S WOOL"

As inevitable as England's plum pudding, famed for its specific gravity, is Ireland's "Lamb's Wool," a drink made by bruising roasted apples and mixing them with ale or milk. Long draughts of this concoction usually are served with liberal slices of English plum pudding, for Ireland is addicted to the dish also.

In England, and in fact through the British Isles, the groaning board and the brimming bowl are the chief characteristic of Christmas celebrations. And if mirth and jollity may be measured by one's physical fullness, there can be no

MOUNTAINS OF MAIL STACKED HIGH AT CITY POSTOFFICE ARE SPEEDED BY EFFICIENT FORCE

This year marks the heaviest outgoing and incoming Christmas package and letter mail in the history of the Coshocton post office, Postmaster A. C. McDonald and Assistant Postmaster Clyde L. Wells, said Saturday.

The big mail rush of packages, parcels and letters, began Thursday. The volume is expected to reach its zenith today. The outgoing and incoming mails are almost equal, the assistant said.

So great was the outgoing and incoming mail this year, Postmaster McDonald found it necessary to double the force at the local office.

Friday was a strenuous day for the clerks. Packages and parcels piled almost to the ceiling in the rear of the building were disposed of by the clerks, who worked diligently.

Six auto loads of Christmas packages and bundles for city delivery, were hauled from the postoffice Friday morning. Many auto trips were made Friday afternoon, the autos being loaded "to the guards" with packages.

The rush is so heavy this year that Tom Stewart has enlisted the aid of the Beatenmiller Co. draymen to handle the excess mail.

About 75,000 calendars, made by the local advertising companies,

Here's Christmas Gift For Church Needing An Organ

G. P. Nowles, Warsaw, Route 2 is willing to play Santa Claus to some rural church in the county in need of an organ.

The Nowles household possesses a Carpenter 6-octave organ with real walnut case, which is no longer needed since the purchase of a piano.

The first congregation, needing such an instrument, that gets word to Mr. Nowles either by phone or letter will receive the instrument as a Christmas gift, he said Saturday.

'ARTIST' HELD FOR THEFT OF AUTO

COLUMBUS, Dec. 22 — Stating that East Liverpool is his home, and that he is "an artist and musician" a young man giving his name as Walter Geer, aged 17, is being held in the county jail here today pending investigation.

Officials said Geer, who appears much older than 17 years was arrested at West Jefferson, near here, accused of stealing an automobile.

BELL CO. SEEKS TO BOOST TOLLS FOR DISTANCE CALLS

COLUMBUS, Dec. 22.—The Ohio Bell Telephone Company today filed with the state utilities commission a new schedule of toll rates providing for slight increases in certain classes of long distance service.

In filing the schedule, the company announced that costs of telephone material and labor have more than doubled in the last ten years while the cost of long distance service has increased only fifteen percent.

The proposed new rates will result in an average increase of three cents per message, company officials said.

DAWES NAMED PRESIDENT OF FIRST COMMITTEE TO PROBE GERMANY'S CAPACITY TO PAY

Inter-Allied Reparations Commission Names American to Head Most Important Body—Committees May Be Filled by Christmas But Will Not Begin Work Until January—America Signally Honored

PARIS, Dec. 22 — Charles G. Dawes, Chicago banker and first director of the United States budget, today was designated president of the first committee that will consider Germany's capacity for reparations payments.

The nomination was made by the inter-allied reparations commission under whose sponsorship the inquiry will be conducted.

Appointment of Dawes was regarded as a signal honor to the United States.

Also it puts the Americans in a position of importance during the course of the investigation.

The reparations commisison officially approved the nomination of Owen D. Young, New York, as another American member of the investigation committees. Young is chairman of the board of directors of the General Electric Company, of Schenectady, N. Y.

The reparations commission decided to refer Germany's request for a loan to the various allied governments.

Recommendation was made that the governments invite the reparations commission's guarantee committee to investigate Germany's food situation. Sir John Bradbury, British member of the reparations commission has nominated three British members of the investigating committees and it was said that these nominations would be confirmed without delay.

Even if the committees are completed before Christmas it is anticipated that the committees will not be able to get down to work until about the middle of January.

The French are particularly anxious to ascertain the amount of German wealth held in foreign countries. It is claimed that the German properties in America alone are worth hundreds of millions of dollars.

France claims that Germany holds much wealth in other foreign countries notably, Great Britain, Scandinavia, Switzerland and Holland.

The German government, in its request for a loan, cited article 248 of the Versailles treaty. The commission, in notifying Germany that the request had been referred to the various governments, cited article 251.

Today's session of the commission lasted an hour and forty-five minutes.

Article 248 says:—

"Subject to such charges as the

CHRISTMAS WILL BE WET AND WINDY, IS PAGE'S PREDICTION

First Day of Winter Is Exceptionally Mild, But Cold Wave Is Coming

Look out for a wet Christmas with wind, rain and probably snow. That was the prediction of Tom Page local weather prophet early today when interviewed.

Should this be the case Old Santa Claus will have to visit Coshocton kiddies in his airplane this year.

Mr. Page says that a change in the weather will become effective today. "My barometer shows that wind and rain, and probably snow will start in today," said the prophet.

Disappearance of the prevailing fog and slightly cooler weather today and until Christmas is Mr. Page's forecast. "From all indications, we're going to have cold weather, beginning January 2, 1924. This will last 14 days. We also may get a thunder storm before Christmas."

Mr. Page remarked that the weather this December is unusual for this time of the year. This is the warmest December in many years.

"December and January in 1917 were two of the coldest months in years. In December that year there were 18 days of zero weather. On one day it was 18 degrees below zero," said Mr. Page. Mr. Page says that his barometer is unusually stationary at this time of the

MRS. M'CORMICK GOES IN REALTY BUSINESS ON ENORMOUS SCALE

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick today was in the role of business woman following announcement that $13,000,000 of the newly created Edith McCormick Rockefeller fund had been placed at the disposal of the realty firm of Krenn and Dato.

The fund will be used in the development of exclusive residences on Chicago's north shore.

Edward A. Dato, in making Mrs. McCormick's backing known at the firm's annual banquet, said that only $5,237,000 had been accepted as yet as the firm took seriously the handling of such an amount.

Christmas Comes Again To Coshocton

(An Editorial)

THERE can be no better reminder to Coshoctonians of Time's swift flight than another issue of the Elks' Christmas Edition. For years this commendable practice has been followed until now it has become a fixed custom, a worthy institution in our municipal life. And as each annual commemoration is celebrated it is harder to realize that another year has lapsed into Eternity.

In an ideal world there would perhaps be no need of the effort that is put forth to bring a touch of real Christmas cheer to the homes of the deserving poor. Philosophers have dreamed of a time when involuntary poverty will be banished and there will be no need of charity in a land like this. We all dream of the message of the Prince of Peace and secretly long for its practical application in the affairs of men. We know that Justice is better than Charity, but in lieu of the one it is still better to apply the other and to do the best we can to substitute unselfishness for greed and to instill love instead of hate in the hearts of men.

For weeks hard work and intelligent effort have been made in preparation for this day. The paper you buy is but a symbol of it all. For weeks busy men have planned by night and striven earnestly by day that Christmas cheer may reign in every home in Coshocton and its environs. The same men today are standing at every street corner and at every factory gate with jests upon their lips but with earnest minds asking neither time nor effort from you, but merely a paltry dollar or two as a token of your kinship with your fellowmen.

There is no giving like that for which we know there will be no return. Intimate friends and relatives we know will remember us as assuredly as we will remember them. In the average exchange of Christmas gifts the joy of giving is closely approximated by the joy of receiving. But to give when we know there is no possibility of our generosity being reciprocated is to obey the age-long injunction: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these, ye did it unto me."

So the burden of our plea today is to co-operate with the Elks in the gracious custom they have inaugurated. Co-operate in the same spirit with your church, with your own lodge, if you are not an Elk, and with the Salvation Army. Help them all. Don't refuse a single request tending to make this a real Christmas in every Coshocton home. Ignore no agency which proposes to make others happy on this day of all days. It matters not whether the recipient of your bounty is worthy or unworthy in your estimation. It is not for us to judge. Better that scores of so-called unworthy are fed and warmed than that one deserving case be neglected.

If Christianity teaches us anything, it teaches democracy. It teaches the brotherhood of man. In the period of war bitterness we scouted the term internationalism and even put men in jail for preaching it as a worthier slogan than mere patriotism. And yet Christ was the first and greatest internationalist. His spirit knew no barriers of race or creed or color. His message was not to the few, but to Jew and Gentile, to Greek and barbarian alike. He spoke not for the times in which he lived, but for all time. He knew no clique or party, no clan or nation, no sect or cult.

He lived with the poor, he plead their cause, he died a victim of patrician hate and fear. He forgave the humble their infractions of church and civil law, but he drove the money changers from the temple. He ever had in mind the mass of men and he stood between them and their exploiters. The theologians of his time with their fine spun theories and their petty bickerings he held in utter contempt. For the downtrodden and oppressed he had a message of cheer and he encompassed them with a boundless love.

The truths he taught still fire the minds and exalt the imaginations of men. The world is still far from what he visioned when he gathered the lowly about him, but the spark he kindled will never burn out. We emulate his spirit for a few days each Christmas time and the puzzle of the ages is why we banish the Christmas spirit the rest of the year. Even tho slowly we are yet approaching the standards he raised. The men who stand in the streets today with their bundles of papers are doing his work, if only for a day, and the world is learning that even for the sake of worldly gain it pays better to love men than to curse them; that peace settles more problems permanently than war; and that in the end hatred and injustice are consumed in their own fires.

Knowing all this let us give in the spirit that he gave. Our own great poet, Lowell, has taught us that the "gift without the giver is bare." We can fill the stomachs and warm the bodies of the needy with our surplus dollars, but it takes kindness and love to fill and warm their hearts. The time is ripe for a change in the tide of human affairs. Mankind yearns for a fuller and a freer life. It may be had by practicing the year around the kindlier, nobler virtues which this holy season inspires.

On Useful Information

DISCUSSION of ways and means for preventing us all from proving ourselves suckers and turning our hard-won dollars over to the gentlemen who operate blind pools has served to recover from the mists of obscurity one of Woodrow Wilson's wisest sayings, to-wit:

> The capacity of the average human mind for resisting the intrusion of useful information is beyond all comprehension

Whatever we may think of Mr. Wilson as world leader, we shall have to admit, after reading this, that he was a human philosopher of sorts. For just as it is true that the knowledge—so well imparted by Lady Luck—that you can't beat the races doesn't keep anyone from playing them, so the knowledge that when you go into a blind pool you stand to lose your money never kept anybody from mortgaging his house, if the fancy struck him, and sinking the money in a fifty percent scheme.

It is quite true, therefore, as the members of the committee of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association have pointed out, that "education is not enough." But discussion of the subject jumps from this conclusion, which is sound, to another, which is apparently that "there ought to be a law." The second conclusion is not entirely logical. All the laws in the world won't keep us from making asses of ourselves if we are determined upon it.

In justice to the committee it ought to be said that as yet they have proposed no law. They are studying the question. Study will adduce the fact, or so it may be prophesied, that the lure of gambling, of staking our luck against an adverse fate, is one of the deepest of human instincts. It is a naughty instinct and perhaps man oughtn't to have it. But, then, neither ought man to have an appendix. But he's got it and it often causes a lot of trouble.

The Rebel

THE rebel against the ways of organized society resents the fact that church and state reserve the right to solemnize and legalize the institution of marriage. "Matrimony," says he, "is no more than the mating of a man and a woman. When they determine to mate, church and state may give their blessing, if they wish, but the mating would be innocent and moral without benefit of either clergy or statute, as it would be innocent and moral if neither of these existed."

Thus far the rebel's logic is sound, but logic and human nature have little in common; and the thing that most annoys the rebel is his secret conviction that society would run amuck if it should accept his reasoning. Society must make a virtue of expediency or resign itself to bedlam.

The rebel holds also that the rights of all men are and should be equal—that to punish the weak with poverty and wretchedness is brutal, and that to permit the strong to acquire goods they cannot use is to take lessons in righteousness from the dog in the manger and to shame the very jungle beasts that eat their fill and leave the offal to lesser folk.

Here, again, he reasons fairly, but again he takes no account of human nature. If the strong could not acquire and hold properties they do not need—if they could not seize prizes to which, by the law of the jungle, their superior prowess entitles them—if they could not, in any manner, feed their vanity by demonstrating, advertising and accentuating the difference between themselves and weaker folk, they would cease to exercise their superior prowess; mankind would fall back to a dead level of weakness and mediocrity, and there would be an end of progress and of civilization.

In Lieu Of Free Seed

GONE is the free-seed graft and to an extent other methods of costless campaigning by our great statesmen in Washington—costless, that is, to the candidate, not to the taxpayers—but the politician is a man of infinite resource.

Only a few of them comparatively have caught on to the new method of enchanting and impressing their constituents—namely, that of getting captured German cannon to place in the public squares of their villages—such artillery to be furnished gratis by the War Department. When, however, the idea spreads we may expect thousands of such bills to be introduced. We do not know what the supply of captured German field pieces may be, but if the bills for their distribution all over the country continue to come in the supply will have to be replenished. Perhaps the Secretary of War might give out a contract for such to the Krupp works and thus aid in the economic rehabilitation of Germany.

As it is, in the first two days of the session there were introduced in the House alone more than 200 bills to get these German cannon into the hinterland. The champion introducer was Tincher, of Medicine Lodge, Kan., who had thirty-eight bills to his credit, which means that more than that number of cannon were called for, because some of the bills demanded two or more. Still, as Mr. Tincher has thirty-two counties in his district, it would not make more than one or two to the county. Second in the list was Raker, of Alturas, Cal., who, with sixteen counties in his district introduced only thirty-three bills for German cannon. Then, there was Hon. Schuyler Otis Bland, of Newport News, who also has some sixteen counties to look after. His score was twenty-eight.

However, as only about fifteen or twenty took part in the initial scramble only a small part of the country has been heard from on the German artillery issue.

Of course, the old stand-by gimlets for the public money barrel, pension and public building bills, were more in evidence on the first two days than the new German cannon graft. Of pension bills more than 2,000 were introduced, and of pork-barrel building bills nearly 400. And there were only about 2,800 bills in all poured into the hopper.

reparations commission may approve a first charge upon all the assets and revenues of the German empire and its constituent states shall be the cost of reparations and all other costs arising under the present treaty or any treaties or agreements supplementary thereto or under arrangements concluded between Germany and the allied and associated powers during the armistice or its extensions. Up to May 21, 1921, the German government shall not export or dispose of, and shall forbid the export or disposal of, gold without the approval of the allied and associated powers acting thru the reparations commission."

Article 251 says

"The priority of the charges established by article 248, shall, subject to the qualifications made below, be as follows—

A The cost of the armies of occupation as defined under article 249 during the armistice and its extensions.

B—The cost of any armies of occupation as defined under article 249 after the coming into force of the present treaty.

C—The cost of reparations arising out of the present treaty or any treaties or conventions supplementary thereto.

D—The cost of all other obligations incumbent on Germany under the armistice conventions or under this treaty or any treaty or conventions supplementary thereto.

"The payment for such supplies of food and raw materials for Germany and such other payments as may be judged by the allied and associated powers to be essential to enable Germany to meet her obligations in respect of reparation will have priority to the extent and upon the conditions which have been or may be determined by the governments of the said powers."

The "guarantee committee" is expected to begin its investigation immediately. The inquiry probably will last about a month when a dual report will be made to the various governments and the reparations commission.

The reparations commission postponed consideration of the league of nations' proposal for making a loan to Hungary to restore the finances of that country.

There is much speculation over the identity of the third American who is yet to be selected.

It is expected that the official invitation to the British, French and Italian experts to serve in the inquiry committee would go forward in the course of the day.

YULETIDE

doubt of the applicability of "Merrie England" during the yuletide.

There are no distant echoes of century on century of Christmas tradition in Germany, yet despite that country's present unhappy economic plight, it is safe to assume that the Christmas spirit will roll like a tidal wave over the land—even this year—and banish for the moment the cares and sorrows of the saddest period in German annals.

Normally there are no merrier yuletides than those of Germany. A week before Christmas the Germans bring into the towns and cities loads of pines and hemlocks until the communities are veritable forests of evergreens. Each family must have at least two trees, and if a family is too poor his neighbor usually comes to the rescue and provides a tree or two.

BEGINS DECEMBER 6

The German Christmas festival actually begins on December 6, the eve of St Nicholas day. It is then that German youngsters watch their "p's and q's" for retribution goes hand in hand with reward. An impersonator of St Nicholas makes the rounds and makes inquiries regarding the conduct of the youth during the preceding twelve month. Woe betide those who have chafed and rebelled under parental restraint. The "saint" leaves a bundle of switches for them instead of yuletide gifts.

Good German housewives toil for days in advance preparing decorations for the trees and making the gifts, baking, knitting, sewing and wrapping their handiwork in gay-colored paper, with verses attached.

Even the cattle kneel and pray in Germany but no one has ever heard the text of the bovine supplications—it would be a sin to eavesdrop, so one listens

In Lapland reindeer have a somewhat more prosaic task than they do in more southerly climes where their duties consist of one night's work a year—and that spent in dashing gaily over sparkling, snow capped homes of good children, pausing here and there to toast themselves beside some warm chimney. The Lapps drive their faithful reindeer teams across vast frozen stretches, hitched to a sleigh in order that the family may attend the solemn church ceremonials in the distant village. There they listen attentively to the oft-repeated, monotoned repetition of how Jesus of Nazareth was born.

GLUM LAPLANDERS

With glum faces they greet guests in their huts or tent houses, bury their dead, and appear as unjoyful as possible. To make the season less inviting to the children, the little Lapps are sent to school for a few weeks during the Christmas period. Marriages are solemnized, but there are no festivities, except for the liberal libations of spirituous liquors that are generously passed around and freely imbibed.

The children of the remainder of the Scandinavian Peninsula have a much merrier time than the Lapps. They have Christmas trees and receive gifts—the manner of delivering which is not unlike the American Easter egg hunt. The gifts are hidden away and the litle ones permitted to seek them out. A custom that seems especially appropriate to Christmas time is the inviolate rule of Norwegian children to feed the wild birds with corn and oats, sprinkled on the snow or attached to high poles where the litle feathered fellows may partake of the grain in safety and leisure.

The Swedish housewife is especially devoted to the theory that unless her home is spotless there can be no real Christmas. She spends weeks scouring and scrubbing so that there may be no speck of sinful dirt to violate the spirit of the yuletide. Home-made wines and cheeses also occupy much of her time just prior to the holiday season. As a matter of fact, plenty of work seems to be the Swedish housewife's portion in the Christmas festivities.

FISH FOR CHRISTMAS

Christmas fish is to Sweden what turkey is to America. Four days are celebrated in Sweden. Christmas itself is a day of quiet and prayer, but on the second day the real fun begins and continues until the end of the period. Gay parties, in long sleighs, ride to church to the accompaniment of jingling bells.

The goose is the "national bird" of Denmark at Christmastide. The "Christmas tree" remains standing, for it is in the orchard. At an appointed hour the head of the house goes into the orchard with a stick and strikes the tree three time, speaking the words: "Rejoice and be fruitful." Virtually the whole of Denmark goes on holiday from Christmas to New Year. No one does any work that can be avoided

Besides actually celebrating the birth of Christ, the Russians have a traditional fete in honor of the "Goddess of the Sun." In the old Russia this ceremonial was observed in most of the villages thruout the nation. With the advent of the present regime the tradition may have partly perished along with other customs of the church. The conventional Russian greetingof Christmas Day literally translated was "Greetings for the Lord's birth," to which the person addressed responded, "God be with you."

Quiet in France

In France the Christmas season probably is quieter than in any other country, alto remnants of ageold tradition still endure among the peasant classes. It is chiefly a season in which the storekeepers gaily decorate their stalls and display their gift wares, while the old folks sit about and recite to the younger generation tales of other days. Christmas in Italy is primarily for the benefit of the children. The youngsters pass thru the streets gaily singing and reciting bits of verse. In Spain it is a period of unrestrained hilarity and festivity.

In America Christmas seems to be a combination of many traditions handed down thru the centuries from old world customs and covered with a purely American veneer.

NEW YORK NEWS LETTER

by

Carol Colbourne

New York—Christmas novelties fill with color the shop windows. Equally fascinating to children and grownups are the animal toys in nearly life size, which range from the terror of the jungle to the tiny marmoset. Besides the lions and tigers are polar bears and every variety of domestic animal from cows to cats, with Charlie Chaplin in his latest stunt interestedly watching their automatic antics.

One of the big events of the week was the screening of "Anna Christie," the Eugene O'Neill drama picturized by Thomas H. Ince, at Town Hall, under the auspices of the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures. A large audience composed of leading editors, critics and dramatists, as well as representatives of all the professions, fully approved of the Committee's action in selecting this picture as exceptional.

Blanche Sweet made her return to pictures in the title role. Her years of absence from the screen seem to have added to her ability as an actress.

The Committee on Exceptional Photoplays has approved only a limited number of pictures as exceptional in the three years of its existence. It was created to give invitation showings of pictures considered particularly praiseworthy. It aims to bring exceptional pictures to the attention of those interested in the development of the photoplay and seeks to build up an organized liberal group which will oppose the "censorship" with its restrictions and arbitrary methods. It also strives to encourage the independent producer to experiment with new types of pictures orginal in theme and treatment thus keeping alive the creative impulse in motion pictures and furnishing an ever growing audience for the sincere production of serious themes.

"Anna Christie" is being released by the Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

The simplicity of crepe and velvet evening gowns is relieved by bright ornaments of rhinestones or pearls or both combined. They range from simple strands smartly supporting the shoulders of a gown, to intricate spider webs of silver threads and brilliants most effectively placed. Flexible interlacing circles of brilliants set in silver metal hold in place the soft drapery which is still a feature of evening gowns, or are worn as a half belt on the right side to define the low waist line. Parisiennes are wearing daring color combinations, brilliant cerise with soft mauve embroidered with dull silver. Many smart couturiers use flowers or a chou of ostrich fronds as a finish to their gowns. In delicate colors these are often the only decoration on a full skirted frock.

It grows more and more difficult for the censorious to be certain of their right to censor. For several years now, they have taken comfort in the "silly way girls were ruining their health by wearing low shoes and silk stockings in the winter." It was an actual blow to them when wool hosiery came into favor. But wooly ribs can't be worn with every costume and so there are still opportunities for shudders of disapproval. There are going to be a good many disappointed disapprovers this year—if they learn the truth. But maybe they won't, for ankles will be more deceptive than ever. Appearing to be clad in sheerest silk, they may be snugly and comfortably covered underneath with a warm protection of wool. The newest things in the smart woman's winter wardrobe are "Gotham Invisibles," flesh-colored knitted spats that come just up to the knee which we put on and draw our silk hosiery over and which keep us warm and somehow manage to live up to their description of invisibility.

New red satin ribbons for tying Christmas parcels have hair line stripes or figures of gold. They vary in width from one to four inches. Elaborately decorated French gift boxes are square, oval, round, oblong, diamond or heart shaped. They are covered with gay French prints, or are painted with Watteau scenes, figures or flowers.

Dr. Paul D. Foote, chief of the atomatic physicians section of the Bureau of Standards, thinks that upon increasing knowledge of the proprieties of electrons, tiny particles of electricity revolving about a nucleus to make up the atom or miniature solar systems, will depend all future progress in chemistry.

"The electron is responsible for all reactions forming the basis of chemical industry," Dr. Foote said. Other scientists have ventured the bold assertion that the solution of the great problem of creation may be solved once masters of thot know just what is the electron.

"The place of the sun is taken by the nucleus in likening the atom to a small solar system," Dr. Foote explained.

"The nucleus is itself very complicated in structure, and around this revolve electrons in orbits similar to those of planets."

The nucleus of these tiny systems has a certain electrical charge, it was stated, charges which form an attraction by which a number of electrons can be held in orbits about it. There are scientific laws which regulate the number of electrons one nucleus can hold, depending upon its structure.

"If a large comet struck the earth, but not hard enough to knock it clear out of the solar system, it would move thereafter in a different orbit, and its years would be different," Dr. Foote said.

"But if a wandering electron strikes another electron in an orbit of an atom, the electron, if not knocked completely out, will return to its original orbit. And in this return it radiates an amount of energy in the form of light, X-rays and other energy known to science."

It seems that these electrons in collision radiate energy of certain wave frequence. This radiated light may be measured by a spectroscope. By these measurements scientists believe the structure of the atom may be determined definitely.

The chemical properties of matter may be determined by the position of electrons and their number. A hydrogen atom has one electron, for instance; helium, two; lithium, three; copper, twenty-nine and radium eighty-eight.

From these observations of Dr. Foote, it takes no scientist to appreciate the continual reaction that is going on within the human body. It doesn't seem unreasonable that a severe pain in the stomach, after indulgence in rich foods at late hours might be attributable to a serious collision of the many solar systems of the chemical properties of food.

When one's system is all in a tangle, and gout and headaches and bad livers make life just one awful situation after another, future physicians may be able to shoot a first-class electrical current thru the body, putting all these electrons and atoms and nucleuses back in their regular orbits and hence getting one back to the proverbial "normalcy."

The Bureau of Standards hasn't gone this far yet, however.

ITCHY PIMPLES ALL OVER FACE

Spread and Eruptions Formed. Cuticura Healed.

"My trouble first started with little pimples that broke out all over my face. Later the pimples would break open and itch badly, and when I scratched them they would spread and sore eruptions formed. The trouble lasted about a year. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and the pimples began to improve. I continued using them and now I am completely healed." (Signed) John Hartman, 3119 N. 21st St., Kansas City, Kansas.

Clear the pores of impurities by daily use of Cuticura Soap and occasional touches of Cuticura Ointment as needed to soften, soothe and heal. They are ideal for the toilet, as is also Cuticura Talcum for perfuming.

Honoring Mrs. Everett Moore on her thirtysixth birthday anniversary, a company of 35 friends gathered at her home in West Lafayette Thursday evening, giving her a delightful surprise.

Music and games featured pastimes for the evening. Later a delicious luncheon was served.

Miss Faith Johnson, 238 south Third-st, left Thursday evening for a ten days stay in Chicago, Ill., and Valparaiso, Ind., with friends.

While there she will attend a number of fraternity dances and other social functions.

GAS RATE BOOST AT W. LAFAYETTE

Residents of West Lafayette and vicinity are subjected to an increase in the cost of gas there. The price has been increased from 95 cents per 1,000 feet, without the discount, to $1.25 per 1,000 feet, without the discount. Where the minimum charge before was $1.00, it is now $1.50.

The reason for the increase in price, as given, is that the company was not able to meet expenditures under the former rate.

How this Newspaper Gave You the World's News First

Every Day Last Month

YOU were told, on October 25th, by this newspaper in a dispatch from London, that the United States and Great Britain would join hands in negotiations to SAVE THE PEACE OF THE WORLD through an international conference, that would attempt to settle forever the vexing question of German reparations.

YOU knew the great fact TWELVE HOURS BEFORE official WASHINGTON or London knew it.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

received the momentous information in advance from a high official personage who had learned to trust INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE. And that news was transmitted to YOU—

Accurately--Impartially--Swiftly

The triumph of INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE was made complete twelve hours later when the State Department at Washington, in an official announcement, verified the dispatch in every detail.

In like manner an INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE dispatch told YOU on October 6th that Mathies, leader of the Rhineland secessionists, had announced that a Rhenish republic would be set up independently of Germany "before Christmas."

The secessionist leader made his prediction in a dingy restaurant in Dusseldorf where an INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE correspondent found him breakfasting, with a revolver beside his plate as a protection against expected assassins!

The plans of the secessionists revealed by INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE came true in all respects. On October 21st the RHINE REPUBLIC ACTUALLY WAS SET UP under Mathies' Leadership.

Read the news dispatches of INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE regularly. It's slogan

"Get it FIRST but FIRST get it RIGHT" is your guarantee of full and accurate knowledge of all the world's great events as you follow the tremendous drama of nations daily in

JURY HOLDS FATE OF KLAN EDITOR WHO SHOT LAWYER

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 22.—The fate of Phil E. Fox, Ku Klux Klan editor and slayer of attorney W. S. Coburn on [illegible] was placed in the hands of the jury.

In charging the twelve men Judge G. H. Howard declared there was no half way ground; that he was guilty or not guilty of murder.

As result of Fox's plea for acquittal on insanity grounds, the burden of proof rested with defense attorneys, he explained, and not with the state. They were required to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the slayer was insane and irresponsible for his actions.

Only three verdicts were possible. Conviction without recommendation for mercy meant death by hanging under Georgia law. Conviction with recommendation for mercy carried with it life imprisonment. The only other alternative was acquittal.

As a result of the manner in which Fox was placed on trial the state had no power to incarcerate him in an insane asylum. Defense attorneys refused to intimate what the plea might be until the trial was well under way, thereby forfeiting rights for an examination by a state lunacy commission.

Had he been found insane it would have meant the asylum, as state laws prohibit the [illegible] of a mental unfortunate.

Thousands crowded the court room today in anticipation of hearing the verdict. At the prosecution table sat Mrs. Coburn and her daughter Zoe. Only a few feet away was Mrs. Fox, pretty young wife of the defendant, who has been at the side of her husband since the trial began.

Rumors of probable violence in case of an acquittal for Fox today prompted court officials to station heavily armed emergency guards throughout the crowded court room.

TOT MOURNS FOR MISSING FATHER

CINCINNATI, Dec. 22.—"I want to see my daddy for Christmas," four-year-old Beatrice Trebs pleaded today at General Hospital where she is critically ill with diphtheria.

The father, Herman Trebs, 1231 Poplar st, left his home about ten days ago and no word from him has been received by his family.

Beatrice sobs that she does not want any Christmas presents—"I only want my daddy."

Trebs is believed to have gone to West Virginia coal fields to work.

BETTY SEES A QUEER PROCESSION IN INDIA.

"OH, dear!" Betty grumbled when her mama called her back from the gate to get an umbrella. "I don't want that old umbrella. It isn't going to rain."

"You can't tell, dear," said her mother, handing out the despised umbrella. "Better be safe than sorry. These storms come up suddenly and it's cloudy."

"I suppose you'll be asking me to carry it all the time, pretty soon." Betty scowled. "I just hate an old umbrella." And snatching it rudely from her mother, she went. "I don't see why folks have to carry——"

"Gracious!" laughed a merry voice. "Do you mind stepping off the toe of my shoe?"

Betty glanced down and found she was standing on the very tip of a wee green boot. It was so near the color of the grass that she hadn't seen it.

"Why, Gocomeback!" she gasped. "Where in the world did you come from, anyway?"

"Ha, ha!" laughed the little travel elfin, hopping upon a weed as soon as she moved her foot from his shoe. "You mean, where are you going, don't you now?"

"Maybe I do," Betty laughed, shaking the wee little elfin's hand.

"Well, I'm on my way to India," he replied. And without waiting for Betty to invite herself, he caught hold of her hand and in one instant she stood in a queer little village. "This is Peepulpore," said Gocomeback, "in East India."

Betty could hardly see the houses until the great moon came up from behind the clouds, then she began to wonder.

"Why, it's night," she whispered. "Do you always visit India at night?"

"No," replied Gocomeback, "but I just wanted you to see a procession of durzees that will be passing here soon. You know a durzee is a man who sews out by the month. Each housewife pays him from three to four dollars a month to come and do her mending and sewing."

Just then a long line of people came into sight. As they drew closer, Betty couldn't help but laugh.

They were all lean little men, dressed in long white coats and small, round white caps, and every one of them carried an open umbrella over his head.

"Why in the world do they carry umbrellas at night?" whispered Betty.

"To keep off fever and the dew," replied Gocomeback. "You never see a durzee without his umbrella. He never raises it in the daytime when the sun is hot, but always on a bright moonlight night."

They stood watching the queer procession until the last durzee passed. When Betty turned around, she found she was alone beside her own gate.

The rain began to patter on the ground and Betty, with a smile, raised her umbrella. Waving her hand merrily to her mother, she trotted off to school.

WORDS of WISE MEN

We have more power than will, and it is often by way of excuse to ourselves that we fancy things are impossible.

If we had no pride ourselves we should not complain of that of others.

As long as our reputation is untarnished our characters will console us for our poverty.

He is the noblest who has raised himself by his own merit to a higher station.

It is a true saying that one falsehood easily leads to another.

He who does not perceive what is demanded by the circumstances, or says too much, or indulges in vain display, or does not take into account the rank, or study the convenience of those with whom he finds himself, is what we call a tactless person.

History is the witness of the times, torch of truth, the life of memory, the teacher of life, the herald of antiquity.

We may cheerfully permit ourselves to be excelled in those things which are bestowed on mankind by nature or fortune, but not in those which men can secure for themselves by their own efforts.

What is more barbarous than to pervert eloquence, which is a gift of nature for the salvation and preservation of mankind, to the ruin and destruction of the good?

Our purse should not be so closed that our feelings cannot open it, nor yet so unfastened that it lies open to all. A limit should be set, and it should depend on our means.

RUSSIA SPONSORS LONGER BLOUSE

With Costume Slip Now Being Given Greater Importance

By ANNETTE BRADSHAW

THE overblouse has been growing in importance for some seasons. When suits came back after the continued vogue for one-piece dresses, overblouses came with them.

The overblouses usually ended in a band about the hip, and they were much liked in separate blouse form, to be worn with pleated skirts for sports activities.

This season brings the longer blouse into the limelight. Many of the smart new models end between the hips and knees or well down about the knees, following the inspiration of Russia.

With blouses of either kind the logical garment to wear is the practical costume slip. This garment started serving as a petticoat beneath simple one-piece frocks, and now it has progressed, along with the overblouse to a position of greater importance.

A plain black satin slip, finished with a deep hem, is worn with the chic black blouse at the left. The only contrasting touch is seen in a lightly-worked design in white wool that appears on the border of the blouse.

A navy satin slip is tucked at the hem to give a tailored effect and worn beneath the navy kasha Russian blouse at the right.

WINIFRED BLACK TALKS ABOUT The Warring Generations

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

DR. JOHN ADAMS of the University of London says there isn't a thing in the world in all this talk of "Warring Generations."

"Of course, young people demand their freedom," says Dr. Adams. "They are suppressed until they become old, and then they do the suppressing themselves. They have been doing this for the last two thousand years and the world does not seem any different for it."

"Warring Generations"—what an odd phrase. And what a strange state of mind it expresses.

Why should the younger generation wish to war with the old, and why in the world should the old wish to war with the young?

Did mother "war" with the baby when she stayed up nights and helped the first tooth through?

Is it a wish to "make war" upon his children that makes father work himself nearly to the bone to send them to the best school and buy them the best clothes and take them on the best vacations he can possibly manage?

In Books and Plays

Is it the light of battle in that woman's eyes—the one over there who can't look at anything in the world but the sturdy little fellow who pulls at her hat and grabs her coat and romps up and down the seat in the street car till he drives everyone in the car half wild—but mother?

Mother doesn't mind. When you think, "Dear me, how does she stand it to be mauled about so?" she thinks, "I guess they can see he's a pretty strong little fellow."

And in her innermost heart she believes that you who are trying to pity her are really envying her.

And, whisper, maybe she's right at that.

"Warring Generations"—for goodness' sake, how interesting it is to hear about it—in plays and on the screen and in books and in newspapers.

In real life—well, I don't know.

There's Mary who'd like to be married.

Mary has a sweetheart, and he's a nice fellow, too, and devotedly in love with Mary.

But Mary has a mother and a little sister, and she will never marry till she has sent little sister to school and made it possible for her to earn her own living.

Leave mother alone with the burden and struggle of life! Not Mary.

She doesn't seem to be much of a combatant, does she?

There's John. What a great time he has taking good care of the mother who took such good care of him when he was little and helpless.

Try to get him to grumble about it and see the way he'll look at you.

"The young people demand their freedom."

Do they? I wonder if they do—really.

I wonder if they ever think what would have become of them if their parents had "demanded their freedom," too, when the children were little and made such a lot of trouble.

What a fuss over nothing it all is—this "revolt of youth" we hear so much about.

Careless, indifferent, ungrateful children, there have always been, just as there have always been careless, indifferent and selfish parents.

The Same Old Way

But the good, sensible, kindly, sane average parents keep plugging along in the good, kindly, sane, old-fashioned way.

Blood is blood, and love is love, and family ties are family ties, and the normal natural boy or girl feels the call of these things just exactly as much as his grandfather and grandmother felt them two generations ago.

The idle, silly, vain woman of forty who tries to look like her idle, silly, vain daughter of twenty—oh, of course, she and her daughter are at war.

Why shouldn't they be?

You can't blame daughter for resenting the fact that mother is trying to take her place in the world away from her and hold it—can you?

The wild-hearted, reckless girl who thinks of pleasure and nothing but pleasure—how can you blame her mother for trying to put some common sense into her head—before it's too late?

But even that situation rights itself—in time.

When Madge Wildfire marries and settles down herself—she falls in love with her mother all over again and the wise mother knows that and lets Madge alone till the wildfire days are over.

"Warring Generations"—who ever started the phrase?

It sounds very well, but what does it mean—really?

THE HOME KITCHEN

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON

The Authority on Home Cooking

For a Real Christmas Dinner.

THE "at-home" Christmas dinner is apt to be a bit old-fashioned in makeup even in a modern household, for as the day approaches and we begin preparations, dinners we have known come to mind, and before we know it we are in the groove of tradition. The safest way to do is to put the menu down in black and white, and stick to the plan of a five-course meal.

MENU.

Choice of Relish, Oysters, Fruit Cocktail
Baronet Soup
Fish or Entree
Turkey and Trimmings
Salad Course
Dessert.

This working menu but indicates the courses. The markets upon which we may draw, the skill of the cook and the amount we desire to spend for the meal determine just how it shall be worked out.

The following menu should prove excellent and the ingredients are available in most localities. The choice of the relish, whether a savory canape, raw oysters or a fruit cocktail, we leave with the hostess, starting the recipes with soup.

Baronet Soup.

Make two quarts of rich and well-seasoned bouillon, clearing it well and removing every particle of grease. [illegible]

Creamed Fish in Ramekins.

Take two cups of [illegible] fish [illegible] with tiny hot rolls and cucumber relish.

YOUR HEALTH

For Fine Permanent Teeth Take Care of the Baby Ones

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND

WHEN the baby is born he has no teeth. One by one, or rather two by two, or in groups they appear. The "cutting" or "eruption" of the teeth follows pretty closely certain rules.

The teeth are in the jaw bones all the time, but they have to develop in size and strength. In short, like the body itself, they must grow. When they get big enough they crowd through the soft bone and finally cut their way through the gum.

The first of the teeth to appear are the two at the front and center of the lower jaw. These are called the "lower central incisors," and they appear when the baby is from six to nine months of age.

After the lower central pair come the upper incisors, not only the central ones, but also one on each side of the central pair, four in all. These are cut at about the twelfth month.

Then to match the upper group there appear two more lower incisors. By the time the baby is fourteen months old he has eight front teeth, four on each jaw.

Within the next six or eight months he adds a tooth at each side of the lower and upper groups. These four new teeth are called the "stomach teeth," or the "eye teeth," or the "canine teeth."

Next we find a double tooth appearing at the back of each jaw on both sides. Later the vacant spaces are filled in and by the time the child is two or two and one-half years old he is the proud possessor of twenty teeth.

Once in a great while a baby is born with a tooth or two. In some instances the teeth are cut very early and in others much later than the average time I have given.

The time of the teething is determined by the degree of nourishment and general welfare of the child. So long as the child is strong and vigorous we need not worry about the teeth or about the teething. Many rules are broken by Nature's own way of dealing with the individual problems.

The twenty teeth I have described are the first teeth and in the course of time these will be replaced by the permanent teeth. At the age of six years, or thereabouts, the first of these appear. They are double teeth and are placed back of the baby molars. Sometimes they are called the "six year molars."

Just because the first teeth are not to remain is no reason why they should be neglected. They must be kept in repair so they will not drop out before the second teeth are ready. They are needed to help the development of their successors.

Cavities in the baby teeth require attention. If neglected the decay may find its way through the first tooth into the underlying permanent tooth.

The child should be taught to care for his teeth, and the parents should see to it that the baby teeth are kept clean and in good condition.

Answers to Health Questions.

M. D. Q. Q.—I am round-shouldered. Will you kindly tell me what to do?

2.—Do you think sweet milk and sugar is fattening?

A.—Take deep breathing exercises and try to form the habit of standing in an erect position.

2.—The combination you mention is quite fattening.

* * *

A. S. Q.—What is the correct weight for a person who is five feet, five inches tall?

2.—Will you kindly tell me what would remove a scar left on the face from picking a blackhead?

A.—The correct weight for a woman varies according to age from about 126 pounds at eighteen to about 148 pounds from fifty-five to sixty-five, if her height is five feet, five inches.

2.—I would advise you to consult a skin specialist. After examining the scar he will be able to tell you whether or not electric or X-ray treatment would be likely to help. If the scar is recent, massage may help you.

J. M. Q.—Will you kindly tell me if anything can be done for stammering?

A.—Stammering is usually a habit. The patient should read aloud very slowly, for about half an hour each day. He should be careful to speak slowly.

M. P. Q.—What will remove sunburn and tan and at the same time whiten the skin?

A.—Equal parts of lemon juice and peroxide tend to remove sunburn and whiten the skin.

MRS. E. Q. Q.—I have a pain between the eyes which causes me to frown. Will you please tell me how to overcome this?

A.—Have your eyes examined. You probably need glasses.

Three-Minute Journeys

By Temple Manning

THE FORLORN CITY OF NITRATE FIELDS.

OF all the forlorn and unpleasant cities, Antofagasta, Chile, is probably the most forlorn and unpleasant to a casual visitor. Nevertheless it is one of the richest and most prosperous spots on the globe, for it is the centre of the nitrate industry.

To get ashore from a passenger ship at Antofagasta you must utilize a rowboat. And the rowboat must push its way through the largest schools of seals to be discovered in any civilized harbor on earth. The boatmen literally have to feel for a vacant spot in the water. Of course, these are not fur seals, but the variety found in San Francisco's harbor.

Antofagasta is a city built on a desert—and a salt desert at that. Nothing can grow there, no trees or flowers. There is a fine, penetrating salt dust in the air. You kick up clouds of it when you walk. Your clothes soon get ruined. It's a place [illegible]. Yet many thousands call it their home.

Nitrates are found over a territory of several hundred miles of salt desert running north to the Peruvian border. This territory was once [illegible] the country of Peru, but Chile went to war with Peru [illegible] the nitrate fields. They were a government monopoly and for many years, until the outbreak of the great war, the revenue was so great that it paid almost all the expenses of Chile. Therefore, the people of Chile paid practically no taxes.

The desolation of the nitrate fields is beyond description. The nitrate, or nitrate of soda, to name it properly, lies beneath a layer of soil about six feet thick composed of sand, feldspar, phosphates and other mineral matters. The caliche or mineral which contains the nitrates consists of from 40 to 75 per cent nitrate of soda and from 20 to 25 per cent common salt.

The caliche is worked up on the spot for crude nitrate of soda by extracting the salt with hot water, allowing the suspended earth to settle, and then transferring the clarified liquid, first to a cistern where it deposits part of its chloride of sodium at a high temperature, and then to another, where on cooling it yields a crop of crystals of pure nitrate.

By-products of the nitrate field are iodine, common salt and other minerals. Other processes produce ammonia.

The value of nitrates to the world in renewing and enriching the soil is enormous. Germany had always used a vast quantity of Chilian nitrates and her crops suffered frightfully during the first years of the war when it was cut off. A German chemist then found a method of extracting nitrates from the air, which was of much assistance to the German farmers until the end of the war.

Fine Dust Permeates Everything.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
We are two girls, aged 15 and 18. Are we too young to go to dances? Our parents object to our going and we can't go unless we slip off. We are friends with two young men whom we love dearly, and we think they care for us because they have asked us to marry them. Please advise us what to do.

GOLD AND SILVER.

GOLD AND SILVER: If your parents object to your going to dances, it would be unwise and really deceitful for you girls to go. Take your parents into your confidence at once and tell them of the proposals you have received. You are both too young to manage your own lives alone and need their advice.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am a girl of sixteen. A few months ago I met a young man whom I took a great fancy to. When he meets me he speaks nicely to me. He pays lots of attention to me but never has asked me to go out with him.

Kindly advise me what to do.

SILLY.

SILLY: Invite the young man to call, my dear, and make his visit so pleasant that he will wish to see you more often.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am a girl of seventeen. While on my vacation I met a nice young man whom I like. Shall I write to him first or wait and let him write to me?

BETTY JANE.

BETTY JANE: The young man should write first.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
A young man brought me home from a dance to which I had asked him to go. It was the first time I had gone out with him and when he brought me home what should I have said to him? I did not say anything but "Good-night."

I have not seen him since the party and he has never called on me. Please advise me what to do.

BROWN EYES.

BROWN EYES: You might have asked the young man to call. When you see him again, extend the invitation.

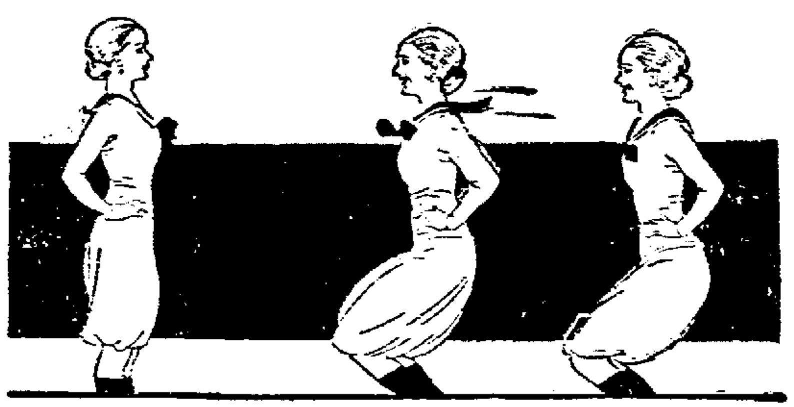
Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her, in care of this office.

To Acquire Grace and Poise Practice Balancing Exercises

By LUCREZIA BORI
The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

PERFECT poise is truly an attribute to be envied. When you meet the woman who possesses it to a marked degree you realize just what a charming quality it is.

She is so graceful and lovely, and she makes you feel so at ease and so well-poised yourself that you find her company truly delightful. This type of charming woman is especially welcome to the person who may lack an abundance of self-possession. To meet someone with it undoubtedly helps the less-assured person to absorb some of the same quality she finds so delightful and so reassuring.



Bend Your Knees and Hop Forward and Back.

Now, if you analyze this attractive possession you'll find that there is a deal of background that goes with it.

First, there's physical poise and balance, and with it there's mental poise and assurance. Now, the latter attributes are partly due to the physical poise. A mind which is agile and alert and which is able to project itself and meet other minds half way has much more leeway when there's physical poise and assurance to back it up.

The person who is clumsy and ungainly in moving about is bound to be a tiny bit distracted by this fact, and the mind is thus robbed of perfect ease and freedom.

Take the small incident of an afternoon tea. The woman who knows perfectly how to balance a teacup and a bit of cake is free to be gracious and charming and to enjoy conversing with those about her.

On the other hand, the woman who is clumsy in these small details of management is painfully aware of it. She becomes embarrassed and is unable to join in the conversation about her or to enjoy herself. At some time or other you may have suffered the latter embarrassment, and if you have I'm sure you would go to any lengths to school yourself into perfect poise and the security and happiness it brings.

The first step is to overcome self-consciousness. This can only be done by making your movements so free and graceful that you don't think about them at all. The road to this is through exercise, and here's an exercise that helps you wonderfully to gain control and perfect balance:

Stand erect with your heels together, your head up and your hands on your hips.

Now bend your knees as deeply as you can, keeping your hands on your hips and your head up.

The next step is to hop forward, still in this bending position. As you hop, your knees will naturally unbend a little, but when you land they will bend again to the first position.

Now hop back.

Keep up this hopping forward and back, doing it rapidly and only landing for a few seconds between hops.

You will grow tired quickly at first, no doubt, but if you repeat the exercise for a few minutes each day you will find that you can gradually do it longer and longer without tiring.

The physical balance you gain in this way should help you to mental poise and ease.

MY HUSBAND'S LOVE

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Dr. Braithwaite Accepted the Situation.

DR. EDWIN BRAITHWAITE turned astonished and unconsciously reproachful eyes upon his wife at Dicky's inadvertent revelation.

"Why, what's this, Harriet?" he asked helplessly. "Going away tomorrow? You haven't told me——"

I dug my elbow warningly into Harriet's arm.

"She hasn't had time," I struck in gaily. "If you're going to chastise anybody, Edwin, cut a rod for me. I'm the guilty party. It was I, alone, all by myself, who thought of this plan, and enticed Harriet into joining me at the farm for a few days. Indeed she hasn't promised me certainly yet. But of course Dicky jumped to the conclusion that she had."

A Tactless Remark.

"Don't you believe a word, Edwin," Dicky admonished. "I don't know much about my sister these later years, but my spouse is the most accomplished bunk thrower in existence. For instance, I was led to believe but a few minutes ago that Harriet was the one panting to leave home and husband and was dragging Madge along reluctantly by the hair."

I planned several slow tortures for my tactless husband in the few seconds which elapsed before I gathered enough breath for a retort. Why could he not have played up to my obvious cue? It was one thing to have Harriet leave her husband to his own devices, as an offset to the too assiduous care with which she had surrounded him for years; it was distinctly "something else again"—I recalled the phraseology of Lillian's old colored cook with a smile—to hurt and offend him by having him believe her anxious to get away.

"I fancy Edwin knows Harriet well enough to take your chatter for what it is worth," I replied, with an edge to my voice which I hoped Dicky would recognize as a signal to keep quiet. "The whole thing, Edwin"—I turned to him—"was planned by me because of Mother Graham. You know she is getting older and feebler each year, and she is really pitiful in her anxiety to have Harriet with her for a good, long visit."

I was speaking but the truth in the last words. Indeed I had felt distinct irritation against Harriet for her willingness to sacrifice her mother's longings to her husband's convenience. I was sure of my generous, big-hearted brother-in-law's response, however, and his prompt reply justified my belief.

"Why, of course!" he said heartily. "Harriet ought to go, and I shall get along famously, never fear. It was only, my dear," he turned to his wife gallantly, "that I was so taken by surprise. But, really, you could not go at a better time. I am feeling unusually fit, and my patient is in such good hands and has rallied so wonderfully that I have no special anxiety there. Dick and I will ramble around New York—that is if he can put up with an old man's——"

The Note of Pathos.

"Didn't I tell you?" Dicky demanded of me. "What old Ed and I will do to poor old Broadway."

"No doubt we shall find it a deep maroon tint when we get back," I returned. "But we don't envy you. We'll be feeding the chickens and hugging Junior——"

"I'll trade anything on Broadway for that privilege," Junior's uncle said, and there was that in his voice as he uttered the apparently jesting words which clutched at my heartstrings. That Harriet recognized the note also I knew by the convulsive twitch of her arm next to mine, and I hastened a commonplace return.

"You ought to be able to run out and take the privilege in a couple of days, couldn't you? You could see Mrs. Durkee before you took the early train on one day, and after you came back on the evening one the next. That would give you almost two days with us."

"That's a splendid idea, Madge," he said with enthusiasm. "I ought to be able to manage it in about three days from now. And it will break the loneliness of your absence, my dear." He smiled affectionately at his wife.

"Are you yearning to have me break the loneliness of yours?" Dicky struck in with a jesting smile at me, but I fancied that I detected a note of bitterness behind the gibe, and with quick and inconsistent contrition for a resentment which I knew could not be healed so quickly, I answered him swiftly—eagerly:

"Of course I am. If you don't come with Edwin, I shall——"

"Don't be too brash in your threats," Dicky said, but there was a relieved note in his voice, and then the limousine halted in front of a brilliantly lighted entrance.

BUCKEYE BREVITIES

Gathered by I. N. S.

TODAY'S BRIGHT SPOT

Pearl Killion, sophomore at Ohio State University, sure has a tough time of it. Embarrassing, you know, for a fellow to have such a name.

Pearl was invited to join Kappa Phi, Methodist girls sorority, the other day. "Be sure and wear a white dress," the invitation stated. Pearl wouldn't do it, tho. He wouldn't even think of it, he said.

So he laid the invitation aside with others to become a member of the Y. W. C. A., to take "gym" with the co-eds, and the latest, which invited him to see "the latest in imported underwear, slips, camisoles, sheer hose and other articles that appeal to the fancy of the well-dressed girl."

ASHLAND—James O. Garver, 63, died at the hospital here from burns sustained in attempting to rescue his wife following a coal oil explosion in their home October 7. Mrs. Garver died two hours after the accident.

DEFIANCE — Shop lifting has been unusually frequent here during the holiday season trade rush, merchants state.

WOODSFIELD—Christmas tree parties are the rage here over the week-end. Annually, crowds are formed to go to the banks of Sunfish creek to cut Christmas trees, most of the local supply being obtained in that pine tree bordered valley a few miles from the town.

ELYRIA — An attempt to burn out the chimney of the Bethany Baptist church resulted in the destruction of the pulpit and extensive damage to the building.

MEDINA—The city council has refused to grant raises in salary to the mayor and various other city officials, members asserting that any increases should have been made before the election.

BUCYRUS—The last detour on the Marion-Bucyrus road in Marion county has been eliminated, making a complete hard surfaced roadway from Sandusky to Columbus and thence to the Ohio river.

BELLAIRE—Geo. V. McGaughy, local accountant, has been appointed receiver for The Ultimate Bus Co. under $10,000 bond.

BUCYRUS—Coroner Russell J. Caton rendered a verdict of accidental death in the inquest over the death of Miss Mary Heinlen, who died in the hospital shortly after being struck by an automobile driven by Raymond Lichty, of this town. The coroner's finding implicates no one as being in any degree responsible for the fatality, which is held to be purely accidental and not the result of negligence.

ASHLAND—Christmas greetings in the form of an original poem were received here by O. Crittenden from his uncle, O. J. Stough, of San Diego, Cal., who expects to celebrate his 106th birthday next April 15.

DEFIANCE — When Ambrose Imbers, Napoleon, former local resident, mistook Guy Culkins, Evansport, Ind., for a dry detective he attempted to thrash him. The valiant defender of personal liberty paid a fine of five dollars and costs in Mayor John C. Marlatt's court on a charge of intoxication and disorderly conduct. Seeing Culkins seated in a car in Clinton street, Imbers cried "Here's a dry dick," ripped off the side curtains of the machine and engaged the occupant in fisticuffs. The costs include court fees, the cost of new curtains and Culkins' doctor bill. Imbers received severe facial and head wounds also.

ELYRIA — Julius Stevens, Lorain, and Thomas Smith, New Haven, Conn., were held under $2,000 bond each to the grand jury on charges of burglary. The two men were captured after a chase by Patrolman Hamlin after a brick, wrapped in a newspaper, was thrown thru the window of the Charles McCarvel jewelry store.

BRIDGEPORT—The local postoffice force stopped its work of handling the Christmas mail rush long enough to subscribe 100 per cent to the Harding memorial fund. Postmaster Thomas M. Duncan, democrat, is in charge of the fund here.

DEFIANCE — Falling from his haymow at his barn near Sherwood, Elmer Rannel, a partial invalid since last spring, fractured both legs. The accident occurred soon after his sister and her husband had arrived from Danville, Ill., planning to take him back to their home so that they might care for him.

ASHLAND—"The Cat and the Fiddle" will be staged here by the Scarlet Mask Dramatic Club of the Ohio State University on Christmas evening. The dramatic organization is composed of 70 students.

ELYRIA Common pleas Judge W. B. Thompson has affirmed $500 and $1,000 fines against Giegman Poizar, a $500 fine against Dash Dormas and a $1,000 fine against Ernest Davidson. In new cases he assessed Andy Kopco $500 and Joe Barson and Mary Dobson, $300 each. All fines were the results of liquor charges.

BUCYRUS — "Rooms for rent" was the sign displayed by Ira Freese, sheriff of Crawford county, over the portals of the county jail recently. There was not a single prisoner confined in the lock-up, temporarily.

WADSWORTH—Carl and Lena Poder have asked $5,000 damages and an injunction against this village on account of the alleged bad condition of the sewage disposal plant. Several similar suits have been filed.

MEDINA — The Ohio Fuel Gas Co. has struck a 3,000,000 cubic feet a day gas well on the Alvah Garsten farm in Lafayette township.

Accused Of Graft

KEYSTONE VIEW CO. NEW YORK

Col. Charles R. Forbes, formerly head of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau, against whom sensational charges of graft and corruption have been made before the Senate sub-committee investigating the bureau. Colonel Forbes resigned early this year.

WITTICISMS BY OHIO EDITORS

Compiled By I. N. S.

At Christmas time sympathy for the needy is expressed in dollars, not in words.—Martins Ferry (O.) Times.

"There have been times," remarked the fellow who lives next door on the way down town this morning," when the thot has come to me that, if there is the wonderfully increased interest in the Bible asserted in many quarters, a lot of people must be studying less for guidance than for argumentative purposes." Marion (O.) Star.

People are funny, and the girls who wouldn't do their nails in public for anything don't mind doing their faces in public.—Youngstown (O.) Vindicator.

About all some of us have saved for a rainy day is rheumatism.—Akron (O.) Beacon Journal.

A prohibition agent in Germany is urging a "dry Germany" to "spite the French." This is a new form of diplomacy and is worth a trial.—Canton (O.) News.

The newly discovered huppa-huppa dance of faraway Easter Island sounds too much like certain other Oriental dances of which rumor speaks in no uncertain tone.—Cincinnati (O.) Times Star.

TREMOR AT MANILA

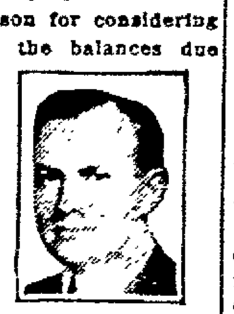
MANILA, Dec. 22. — A severe earthquake awoke most Manilans at 4:35 this morning. The center of the earth disturbance was apparently 150 miles south of this city. The provinces south of Manila were badly shaken altho no serious damage has been reported.

A faucet that automatically shuts off the flo wof liquids when it is removed from a pipe has been inverted by a Frenchman.

REALITIES--AND THE ALLIED DEBT PROBLEM

By WALTER W. HEAD,
President, American Bankers Association.

As a business proposition there is just one reason for considering a recasting of the balances due the United States from foreign governments. That is the possibility that such action would aid in re-establishing a foreign market which will absorb our surplus products.



Walter W. Head

It is possible, of course, for the United States to isolate itself. We can produce everything necessary to sustain life. Mere existence, however, is not the purpose of life. We cannot prosper as we have unless we dispose of the surplus products which naturally accumulate, both agricultural and industrial. We must either sell this surplus abroad or curtail our production and generally lower our standard of living.

Our foreign trade depends upon the purchasing power of foreign countries. Europe's inability to buy has impaired our ability to sell. We have an interest in Europe's prosperity. To protect that interest we must be concerned in the restoration of our debtors' capacity to trade with us and to meet their obligations. We should deal with this subject exactly as a banker deals with a loan of doubtful value.

Get the Facts.

The United States should have a representative with official standing in the Reparations Commission. We should not necessarily be bound by any agreement which may be proposed, but our representative should gather all information available. The United States Government, of its own motion and based on its own information, should then decide whether it should consider the readjustment of its accounts with Europe, and, if so, in what manner. Our own Debt Funding Commission should recommend to Congress whatever readjustment, if any, of the inter-Allied debt may be warranted.

THESE SUGGESTIONS ARE PURELY FOR FACT-FINDING AND ADVISORY PURPOSES—FOR GETTING DOWN TO THE REALITIES OF THE CASE. Precisely what our action should be, to serve the common interest, will be determined by information which at this time is not available. Our first step is to secure the information and our duty is to follow developments intelligently.

THE FRIEND IN NEED

(From the Nation's Business)

Some there are who still think the banker wears horns. Who is the hardboiled citizen, the man behind the thumb-screw? The banker, they will tell you. In the light of this illusion, consider a brief excerpt from the resolutions adopted at the recent Atlantic City convention of the American Bankers Association:

"The conclusion is inevitably forced on the impartial observer that the primary need of the world is moral and spiritual regeneration as the essential basis for economic recovery. Until the nations of the world are willing to liquidate their hates they can make little progress toward liquidating their debts."

Hardboiled? Not that. It harks back to Socrates. "The true politics," he said, "is the first of all a politics of the soul."

Come to think of it, when we want someone to take care of our funds to whom do we turn? To the banker. When there's a civic enterprise afoot, whose time and money do we commandeer first? The banker's

SENATOR CAPPER PREDICTS SUBSTANTIAL IMPROVEMENT IN THE FARMING INDUSTRY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—American agriculture is slowly climbing out of the slump and all indications point to a substantial improvement in the industry during the new year, Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas declared today in an interview with International News Service.

Capper, leader of the farm bloc in congress is recognized as one of America's foremost authorities on agriculture.

"All indications point to a gradual improvement in the farmer's economic position during the new year," Capper said.

"The wheat farmer, of course, is not yet out of the ditch.

"For three years he has produced wheat at a loss. But another year should show an improvement. The wheat farmer is curtailing his acreage, cutting his production to meet more nearly the requirements of the home market and avoiding surplus production which is always disastrous to him. Figures and estimates, now available indicate a reduction of wheat acreage of about 15 per cent."

Better business methods, co-operation in the marketing of products, and some decrease in the spread between the cost of things he sells will contribute to the improvement in the farmer's economic position. He still has a long way to go before his prosperity is completely restored. He still is at the bottom of the ladder in comparison with other industries. He must have sympathetic consideration in any scheme looking toward the assurance of national prosperity during the new year.

"His most pressing need is relief from excessive transportation costs.

"I hope to see substantial reduction in freight rates, at an early date.

"With ampler credit facilities, better marketing methods and reduction of acreage more nearly to bring crop yields within the requirements of home market demand, the new year should see a marked improvement particularly in regard to the wheat grower, who last year did not share in the upturn as a whole.

"Among legislative influences that should have a favorable effect upon the agricultural industry during the year, reduction of war taxes is outstanding. This should ease the burden that productive enterprise and business is now forced to carry.

"It is unfair that earned income should be penalized and unearned income eased of its share of the costs of government and liquidation of war obligations.

"Abolition of the tax exempt privilege would go far toward a more equitable distribution of the tax load. Whatever tax legislation is written should be written on the basis of such distribution share and share alike, according to ability to pay.

"Next in importance perhaps, to the welfare of business, is the readjustment of freight rates. Discriminatory and confiscatory freights are a major factor in the delay of the farmer's economic recovery. In the solution of this problem the farmer is entitled to the sympathetic attention and cooperation of all business men, for the farmer is not only a producer; he is normally a consumer.

"As his return to prosperity is postponed, his disadvantage affects the entire business community," Capper said.

were sent from the postoffice Thursday. It was a big job for the clerks and extra help, but they disposed of them in plenty of time so that it would not interfere with other mails.

Two auto mail trucks have been on the job daily hauling away the outgoing mail. Each truck serves a 16-hour shift. Ten clerks, ten carriers and four extras comprise the working force at the office.

The basement is being used to take care of the excess mail. The letter mail has increased ten fold over last year, the assistant post master reports. That includes both incoming and outgoing mail.

"Few packages are sent away this Christmas without being insured," Mr. Wells said.

The postmaster and his assistant praised the postoffice force Saturday for their splendid work in relieving the congestion of mails. The force has been working late at nights to clear the floor. Many worked all night to relieve the congestion.

The rural and city carriers have left the office each day this week overloaded with Christmas mail. With pouches and packs heaped high with packages, the rural and city carriers plow thru all kinds of weather.

Today and Monday are the last days of the big Christmas rush at the local postoffice.

Following are the names of the clerks, rural and city carriers and other employes of the local office.

Clerks: Leroy Biggs, Robert L. Boyd, Helen H. Lamberson, Lee I. McCammant, Walter Fark, Earl Priest, Zora Smith, W. A. Taylor, Jay Thompkins and Carl Walker.

City carriers: Jud Balch, Herbert Barcroft, Harry Dencer, Oscar Huff, G. J. McKee, Howard Robinson, Don C. Richards and Ralph Wheeler.

Extra clerks and carriers: Ray Kleinknecht, Everett Shilleday, Merrell Wiggins and Ray Hammond.

Ruth Lamberson is special delivery messenger.

Rural carriers: Walter C. Davis, Route 1; J. E. Duling, Route 2; Elgin Maynard, Route 3; C. H. Norman, Route 4; H. D. Smith, Route 5; Everett Veigel, Route 6; Waldo Chubb, Route 7; and John Criswell, Route 8. All rural carriers left in their buggies Friday, owing to the muddy conditions of the county roads. Every space available in the buggies was occupied with mail.

The rural carriers will not make any deliveries on Christmas Day. The city carriers will cease work at noon Christmas Day.

ATTORNEYS CHARTER BRITISH VESSEL TO MAKE TRIP ABROAD

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22. The storm of criticism aroused in congress over the action of the American Bar Association in chartering a British liner to carry members of the association to London next summer instead of patronizing the American lines was increased today.

E. J. Henning, assistant secretary of labor, notified the bar association that as a member he could not approve of the arrangements made and would travel to London on an American vessel.

ORPHAN STRANDED ABROAD SINCE WAR WILL KNOW FIRST CHRISTMAS THIS YEAR IN NEW AMERICAN HOME

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 21 — Little Willie Dunham, five-year-old orphan, while in his swaddling clothes at Coblenz, Germany, during the war, will know the meaning of Santa Claus this year for the first time.

Santa has been denied to Willie thru his brief existence because he had never known a real home before.

But fate at last was kind and provided a daddy, mamma and a real home in time to get things ready for the visit from Santa this year.

Of course Willie is excited. In fact, more than one heart is beating fast as the ocean trip, a journey by rail from New York and a wedding led up to the reunion of three excited but happy souls in time to have Christmas in a real home.

Willie, who never had known a real mother or father, has been in this country only a few days. He chatters in German as he plays with his toys on the floor of his new home, but he is learning to say "papa" and "mamma."

They are his foster parents. The mother, who is also Willie's aunt, was a conductorette in Germany when Willie was playing on his nursery cot in an orphanage at Coblenz. The babe, acting in the role of Cupid, made possible the Christmas reunion.

Daddy, who is Myron Dunham, was a member of the American forces in occupied Germany. One day he visited the orphanage and was attracted by the infant whose mother had died a few days before. The baby's aunt wanted to adopt the child and when Dunham also volunteered, a joint adoption was effected.

Just as story books would tell it, a romance followed and there was a marriage. The marriage, however, was not recognized by army transport officials and when Dunham departed for America he was forced to leave his wife and adopted child behind. The soldier husband and father would send for them later.

Dunham had owned a ranch in Arizona but had sold it when he entered the army. Upon returning, he was forced to find work and only recently had been able to send for his little family.

Christmas was coming and he sent word for a hurried trip. They came with all haste.

Steamship and railroad trains brot them. A second marriage ceremony was performed, this one witnessed by a boy now five years old.

All is well now The little family is settled in a new home and Willie, with his papa and mama is waiting for Santa Claus.

ALL OF HER SONS DIE OF VIOLENCE

Tragic Story of Mother, Wed Four Times, Bared When Her Will Is Filed

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 22.—Married four times and all of her sons the victims of violent deaths before they reached the age of 25—this was the tragic story bared by the judicial settlement of the $25,000 estate of Mrs. Frances E. Sinclair, of Skaneateles.

Mrs. Sinclair, it was revealed, was first married to William Cole, who died soon after their marriage, leaving her with one child, William. Her second husband was Nathaniel Hunter, whose wife had died leaving him a son, Austin. The second husband died.

Austin Hunter, son of Nathaniel Hunter, was killed later in a riot at Denver, Col. Mrs. Hunter's son William, by her first husband, Cole, died from the results of a wound suffered while he was using a scythe.

Dwight Hunter, her own son by Hunter, was found dead in a barn with a bullet through his head. Charles Hunter stood before a mirror in his bedroom and sent a bullet into his brain. All of the children died before they had reached the age of 25.

For a third time Mrs. Hunter was married, this time to W. P. Brown He died in a few years. The fourth husband, James P. Sincleir, survived his wife.

In her will she practically cut him off, leaving him only $1,000 and he successfully fought for his share under the law.

A niece, Marion Moyer, received nearly $12,000 from the estate, and a number of churches and charities benefitted.

GIRL MOONSHINER SENTENCED TO 34 YEARS IN PRISON

CANTON, Dec. 22. Edna Bond, West Virginia mountain girl today began a sentence imposed by Judge George W. McClintic in federal court at Charleston, W. Va. that will keep her there, unless released by executive clemency, for 34 years.

She was convicted with two brothers for operating a still in their mountain home. Judge McClintic sentenced her to serve seven years in the workhouse and pay a fine of $8,000 and the costs. Being penniless she will work out the fine and costs at the rate of sixty cents per day, which adds 27 years to the seven-year sentence.

DADDY OF SCREEN HAS A BREAKDOWN

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 22.- Theodore Roberts, "the daddy of the screen," today was reported "resting comfortably" at the hotel here where he has been confined since Saturday when illness forced him to forego appearing in his act which was heading the bill at a local vaudeville house.

His doctor has refused to diagnose his illness but said it had been brought about by overwork. Yesterday, the actor planned to leave but collapsed as he was going to take a train and was brot back to the hotel. His doctor today said that while Mr. Roberts condition is serious, he did not consider it dangerous.

"Mr. Roberts is just run down," the doctor said.

"All that is necessary for him to recover completely is rest. He has been going at a pace no human could stand. It will take time to recover completely.

Mr. Roberts has appeared in many screen and stage successes, his latest screen appearance being in "To The Ladies." He is a Californian.

Mrs. Roberts is with him here.

COOLIDGE TO NAME CHOICE OF SHIPPING BOARD'S CHAIRMAN

Senate Rejection to Bring Shake-Up in Entire Personnel

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22. — The United States shipping board, a bone of political contention since it was first created back in the early days of the war, probably will be entirely remade by President Coolidge in the next few weeks it was learned at the white house today.

As soon as the senate formally refused to approve the nomination of Edward P. Farley, of Chicago, the present chairman, as now seems certain, President Coolidge will proceed to nominate "his own man" for the post, it was said.

An adverse report on Farley was made yesterday by the senate commerce committee and only lack of time prevented the senate's acceptance of the committee's report.

Farley was a recess appointment of the late President Harding and President Coolidge re-nominated him in keeping with his policy of carrying out, so far as possible, the wishes of his predecessor.

It was indicated at the white house today, however, that Coolidge will not press for Farley's confirmation but will accept the senate verdict and proceed with the appointment of the new chairman of the board as soon as the senate acts. Meanwhile Farley will continue as chairman.

President Coolidge also has withdrawn the nominations of Frederick I. Thompson, of Alabama and Bert Haney of Oregon, members of the board, as a consequence of the senate's action on Farley.

REBELS FORCED TO RETREAT BEFORE FEDERAL ADVANCE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Revolutionary troops have been thrown back from San Marcos, and federal forces are advancing toward Esperanza and Puebla, according to advices to the state department today from the American embassy in Mexico City.

The American consul at Chihuahua reported that Manuel Chao with 50 men attacked and captured a train on the Parral and Durango railroad on Wednesday.

Let's get together on this basis~
SERVICE and COOPERATION

Two big fundamental conceptions of business have gained momentum in recent years—the idea of SERVICE and the idea of COOPERATION.

The Gas Industry has learned that its business is to SERVE the public. The public is learning that COOPERATION with the industry is to the mutual interests of all.

In a real sense we are all partners in this great industry. In the face of diminishing supply of Natural Gas, our interests and your interests in conserving this matchless fuel are mutual.

Then, let's put aside all narrow thoughts, realize that we must depend on each other, and work together to solve our problems and perpetuate the supply of Natural Gas, in order that you may the longer be able to enjoy this great convenience, and that the Gas Industry may the longer be able to supply your needs.

We urge you to read the new Government Book—"Natural Gas Manual for the Home." It states conditions as the Government finds them and suggests ways for you to get better results from less gas. Your local Gas Company has a supply of these books. Ask them for a free copy.

VENIZELOS TO BE ASKED TO RETURN, TAKE LEADERSHIP

ATHENS, Dec. 22—Premier Gonatas declared today that all indications point to the return of former Premier Eleutherios Venizelos to assume leadership of Greek affairs.

The republicans are opposing Venizelos' return, fearing he will recall King George. Republican leaders insist upon the immediate creation of a republican government.

The army and navy officers who signed a protocol demanding the withdrawal of King George, reinforced by 60 chamber deputies, have signed a request that Colonel Plastiras, head of the Greek revolutionary committee, "urgently recall former Premier Venizelos from Paris."

The ex-premier has been living in Paris since the conclusion of the Near East peace conference.

Members of the Liberal party are attempting to persuade leaders of other groups to join in an invitation to Venizelos to return, guaranteeing him a free hand to deal with the present situation.

Admiral Coundouriotis who was sworn in as regent, will have authority to sign decrees in the king's name.

The present government probably will remain in power until the national assembly meets, despite demands of the Republicans for a Republican cabinet at once.

GLASS CO. PAYS HUGE BONUS TO ITS EMPLOYES

BARBERTON, Dec. 22.—The management of the Barberton branch of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company has announced a bonus for each of its employes. The money will be paid to the wives of the married employes—$50 each—with an additional $10 for every child in the family under 13 years. The maximum for each family is $1,000.

This is an innovation in the way of paying bonuses, and is the largest ever paid in a lump sum by this company.

Ten per cent of the year's pay of every salaried employe was another feature of the Christmas bonus handed out by the company.
